

I sent the "Open Letter to the Theology Department of Fordham" to all of the theology faculty at Fordham, St. John's, and Georgetown. I also sent a copy to you and 24 of your fellow graduate students. I got one acknowledgement from Fordham. I've attached the letter I sent to the President of Fordham to this email, as well as an article I have written about one of my complaints against the Magis Center. I was hoping I would be invited to explain my ideas about science and religion in the give and take of a seminar.

I am hoping I can recruit you and a handful of other young people to be my disciples. If you become my disciple, I will communicate only with you. You will, for example, decide what to do with the attached manuscript. Should I publish it on my Ezine article website? Should I send a copy to the Magis Center? Should I sent it to the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith? Naturally, this would make you responsible for the content of the article.
